Wellington sales were held back by declining inventory. There were 566 single family listings, down 10.7% and 301 sales, down 8% respectively from the year ago levels. A similar pattern was observed in the condo market, with 138 listings, a 6.1% decline, and 54 sales, a 21.7% decline. As a result, the pace of the market showed a modest year over year change from its current absorption rates, defined as the number of months to sell all listing inventory at the current rate of sales. The absorption rate for single family was 5.6 months and for condos it was 7.7 months. Price trend indicators showed mixed results as average sales price, and the average price per square foot was skewed lower by reduced activity at the upper end of the market. Median sales price for market wide sales of single families and condos edged higher; single family median sales price rose 2% to $400,000, and condo median sales price increased 1% to $234,375. Price trend indicators in the single family luxury market, representing the top 10% of all sales, were skewed sharply lower due to the decline in sales size, down 32.4% to 4,158 square feet over the same period. Days on market, the average number of days from the last price change to the contract date, expanded for both property types. Days on market for a single family was 11 days longer, and a condo was 33 days longer respectively from the year ago quarter.

LUXURY

- Condo marketing time and negotiability expanded
- Condo listing inventory declined
- Single family price trend indicators were skewed lower by large decline in sales size
- Single family negotiability and marketing time increased
