Price indicators in the Pam Beach market moved higher as listing inventory declined. The median sales price of a condo edged 0.9% higher to $552,500 and the median sales price of a single family home jumped 37.9% to $4,275,000 respectively from the prior year quarter. This occurred despite the decline in the average size of a sale. Condo average square footage was 1,692 square feet, down 1.3% and single family home average square footage was 4,025, down 23.5% respectively over the same period. The size drop within the luxury market, the top 10% of all sales, was more pronounced, falling 40.1% to 5,582 square feet over the same period. Median sales price for the luxury market fell 34.3% to $6,558,500 as a result. Listing inventory remained scarce, falling below prior year levels. The number of condo listings fell 25% to 270 as the number of single family listings declined 9.2% to 119 respectively from the same period last year. The decline in luxury listings was consistent with the overall market, falling 20.7% to 65. The decline occurred despite the 17.6% rise in the luxury price threshold to $5,850,000 over the same period. Luxury listing discount, the percentage difference between the list price at time of sale and the sales price, fell sharply to 7.6% from 18.7%. The amount of the decline in negotiability was unusual since it tends to remain higher than the listing discount in the overall market. The faster pace of the luxury market was reflected in the decline the in absorption period, the number of months to sell all inventory at the current rate of sales. The absorption rate fell to 16.3 months from 24.6 in the prior year quarter.

LUXURY

- Average square footage of a sale fell sharply
- Price indicators dropped, reflecting smaller sized sales
- Marketing time rose as negotiability tightened
- Absorption period was one third faster than last year
